Neuromodulatory approaches including TMS (Transcranial Magnetic Stimulation), tDCS (transcranial Direct Current Stimulation), DBS (Deep Brain Stimulation) as well as ECT (Electroconvulsive Therapy) are gaining increased clinical and research attention in the treatment of severe mental illness. The Zucker Hillside Hospital has recently beginning July 1, 2018 for individuals interested in attaining expertise in this rapidly developing field. The Zucker Hillside Hospital is currently the clinical center for more than 6000 treatments/year with ECT, TMS and tDCS and is conducting a number of research studies focused on the interindividual variation in response to ECT, TMS and tDCS treatment. Our multidisciplinary team provides comprehensive research opportunities in understanding the underlying neurobiology behind these approaches. Research approaches include basic clinical well as more invasive techniques using iEEG (intracranial EEG) and
